Directions: <http://www.health.state.mn.us/about/sop.html#location>

Topic: What does PREA have to do with me?

The Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) was passed by Congress in 2004. The purpose of PREA is to shed light on and address this very common but overlooked issue. PREA directs states to create victim-centered responses to victims of sexual assault while incarcerated and to develop strategies to prevent prison rape. The Department of Corrections has focused energy on implementing PREA guidelines in Minnesota: all prison staff in the eight adult and two juvenile facilities have been trained on the basics of sexual assault/violence; investigative officers have had specialized 40 hours of training in investigating sexual assaults; facility based SART teams recently spent two days with DOC staff and MNCASA designing their response protocols.

What does this have to do with me? We know that the effects of violence within prisons affects more than the prison environment. The vast majority of MN inmates return to their communities and unaddressed physical and emotional health issues of victimization can be the catalyst for ongoing problems and challenges.

Lydia Newlin, DOC Victim Liaison, and Collin Gau, Minnesota Correctional Facility, St. Cloud, will talk about the culture change that is underway in Minnesota prisons, the work of PREA to date, and the vision for preventing prison sexual assault.

Lunch will be provided (no charge) however, an RSVP is Required (by Wednesday, February 4)

Men and Women as Allies: National Conference on Primary Prevention of Violence Against Women, April 14-15, 2009

Hyatt Regency Washington on Capitol Hill
Washington, DC

Men Can Stop Rape believes it is time for a new conversation about prevention of violence against women based on some tough, hard questions. What are women's and men's roles in primary prevention? How can domestic violence, sexual assault, and men's anti-violence groups work together to advance prevention?

We will meet these and other challenging questions head on, seeking informed and constructive answers. You will hear keynotes from new appointees and participate in federal briefings. Your participation will help to create a conference climate that is inspirational, motivational, and collaborative. #### 7. 7. Conference: International Bridging Perspective in Intervening With Men Who Batter, May 12-15, 2009

The 2009 International Bridging Perspectives Conference in Minneapolis, MN will bring together nearly 600 people interested in and involved with working with men who use violence in their familial relationships with women and children. The focus of this conference includes bringing together those who have facilitated and run batterer intervention programs with people in other fields such as Sexual Assault, Child Protection, Courts, Law Enforcement, Probation and Parole Officers, Battered Women's Shelter and Advocacy staff, Clergy, Healthcare professionals, Responsible Fathering program staff and many more.

The planning team recognizes that a good share of intimate partner violence is directly and indirectly sexual assault related. Many professions come in contact with batterers and are part of the intervention with them. This will be the first conference in the 26 year history of these BIP conferences that we are strategically inviting such a broad range of professionals to connect, share and learn together in ways we can all be a part of this intervening process with men who batter.

Please visit the conference website at www.bridgingperspectives.org for more information.

12. 12. New Survey, Criminal Victimization, 2007

A new study from the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Statistics finds that the violent crime rate in the United States was largely unchanged from 2005 to 2007, but that there was a 25 percent increase in rape and sexual assault over those two years. However, because the methodology for the survey changed in 2006, and because the overall number of rapes and sexual assaults is low compared to other crimes such as burglary, theft and assault, statisticians at the Bureau caution that the increase is not statistically significant. ## 13. 13. Alcohol and Sexual Violence Perpetration

This paper summarizes the research literature that examines alcohol's role in sexual violence perpetration. Half of all sexual assault perpetrators are under the influence of alcohol at the time of the assault, with estimates ranging from 30% to 75%. There are three explanations for the frequent co-occurrence of alcohol and sexual violence perpetration and each is relevant for some perpetrators.

The first explanation is that alcohol plays a causal role in some sexual assaults. Alcohol is one of many risk factors that increase the likelihood that a man will feel comfortable forcing sex on an unwilling woman. The second explanation is that the desire to commit sexual assault plays a causal role in the decision to consume alcohol. Some perpetrators may drink alcohol because it makes it easier to engage in disinhibited and aggressive acts. Finally, for some perpetrators there is another underlying factor that is the cause of both the sexual violence and the alcohol consumption. For example, men with antisocial personality traits are more likely than other men to drink heavily and to commit a variety of aggressive acts including sexual violence.

None of these explanations reduce perpetrators' responsibility for their actions. However, identifying the different ways alcohol relates to perpetration aids in the development of effective sexual violence prevention strategies. Read on:

The goals of the listserv are 1) to share information and experiences with pornography and discuss the harm of pornography to individuals, family and society, 2) to analyze current legal, social, and political trends and cases, and 3) to develop strategies and tools to challenge the production, distribution, and use of pornography. Scholars, activists, advocates, therapists, and practitioners are invited to join.

To subscribe to the listserv, please email Professor Hughes at: dhughes@uri.edu. Include in your request your full name, affiliation and short description of the work you have done on pornography or related topics.
