Spiritual Abuse: An Invisible Crime

Monday, August 3, 2009

9:00 a.m. – 3:00 p.m.

Division of Indian Work

1001 East Lake Street, Minneapolis, MN

The focus of this training is to hold on to the Anishinaabe way of life that is threatened by people posing as traditional healers, pipe carriers, sweat lodge keepers and spiritual advisors with intention to financially and/or sexually exploit men, women and/or children. This is a community wide threat causing tremendous damage to those seeking help and healing.

Some that are gifted have chosen to hurt people instead of using their gifts to help, making it very difficult to identify such a person when we have just begun our spiritual journey or trust a gifted person to help us. Come and learn for yourself and educate others. Be part of holding on to the Anishinaabe way of life.

Presented by Skip Sandman, Fond du Lac Anishinaabe & Babette Sandman, White Earth Anishinaabe

Free training, lunch will be provided
Space is limited please RSVP

8. Child Trends Research Review: June/July 2009

Child Trends released 11 new publications over the past two months. In case you missed any of these, here are short summaries and links to the briefs.

The Achievement Gap Begins Early: Study Finds Disparities in Child Outcomes Among Infants

A new Child Trends study commissioned by the Council of Chief State School Officers finds disparities between poor, at-risk children and more advantaged children as early as 9 months of age -- extending prior research that primarily focuses on disparities at kindergarten entry and beyond. The study Disparities in Early Learning and Development: Lessons from the Early Childhood Longitudinal Study--Birth Cohort, identifies low income and low maternal education as the factors most strongly associated with poorer cognitive, social-emotional, and health outcomes among very young children.

Integrating Evidence-Based Youth Programs Into Community Initiatives

A new Child Trends brief, Programs for Children and Youth in a Community Context, provides insights from a recent Child Trends Roundtable with leaders of community initiatives that incorporate evidence-based and evidence-informed programs. Insights include recognizing the value of using data to guide and shape programs; taking both program implementation and sustainability seriously; planning carefully; and being sure that missions are well-aligned across programs, community initiatives and education systems.

A User's Guide to Online Resources for Identifying Evidence-Based, Out-of-School Time Programs

A new Child Trends brief, Online Resources for Identifying Evidence-Based, Out-of-School Time Programs: A User's Guide, can help funders, administrators, and practitioners find evidence-based programs that may be appropriate for their target populations and communities. The Guide provides an overview of 22 resources -- 12 searchable online databases, two online interactive summaries, and eight online documents -- that offer information on a range of evidence-based intervention programs.

Times Have Changed, But Young Adults Still Have High Expectations for Love and Marriage

Despite the recent increases in nonmarital childbearing and cohabitation, most young adults in the U.S. have positive views of marriage and wish to marry someday, according to a new Child Trends brief. The brief, Young Adult Attitudes about Relationships and Marriage: Times May Have Changed, But Expectations Remain High, also finds that young adults value love, fidelity, and commitment in their relationships, and have positive attitudes about cohabitation.

The Benefits of and Barriers to Out-of-School Programs for Youth

Research suggests that participation in out-of-school time programs and activities can lessen the likelihood that youth will engage in negative behaviors, such as using drugs and alcohol, dropping out of school, and practicing unhealthy eating habits. Despite these benefits, millions of youth still do not participate in these programs. Three new Child Trends briefs explore the various reasons for non-participation:

Youth Who Are "Disconnected" and Those Who Then Reconnect: Assessing the Influence of Family, Programs, Peers, and Communities

Non-Participation of Children and Adolescents in Out-of-School Time Programs: Child, Family, and Neighborhood Factors

Why Teens are Not Involved in Out-of-School Time Programs: The Youth Perspective

Spring Issue of The Child Indicator

The current economic situation underscores the importance of having reliable measures of well-being, both as a means of quantifying the downturn's social consequences, and for assessing the effects of policy responses. The Spring 2009 issue of The Child Indicator highlights several new reports on families' struggles and state and federal responses.

Implementing High-Quality Youth Programs

Three new Child Trends briefs present research findings and effective strategies to implement high-quality out-of-school time programs.

How Program Administrators Can Support Out-Of-School Time Staff

Building Systems-Level Partnerships

Data-Driven Decision Making in Out-Of-School Time Programs

These briefs complete a six-part series on the drivers for implementing evidence-based practices in out-of-school time programs, available at Youth Development.

9. Risk Factors for Sexual Violence Perpetration

Risk factors are associated with a greater likelihood of sexual violence (SV) perpetration. They are contributing factors and may or may not be direct causes. Not everyone who is identified as "at risk" becomes a perpetrator of violence.

A combination of individual, relational, community, and societal factors contribute to the risk of becoming a perpetrator of SV. Understanding these multilevel factors can help identify various opportunities for prevention.

NOTE: CDC focuses its efforts on preventing the first-time perpetration of sexual violence. For information on risk and protective factors related to victimization, see the World Report on Violence and Health: http://www.who.int/violence\_injury\_prevention/violence/global\_campaign/en/chap6.pdf [PDF 247 KB]

Risk Factors for Perpetration

Individual Risk Factors

- * Alcohol and drug use
- * Coercive sexual fantasies
- * Impulsive and antisocial tendencies
- * Preference for impersonal sex
- * Hostility towards women
- * Hypermasculinity

- * Childhood history of sexual and physical abuse
- * Witnessed family violence as a child
- Relationship Factors
  - * Association with sexually aggressive and delinquent peers
  - * Family environment characterized by physical violence and few resources
  - * Strong patriarchal relationship or familial environment
  - * Emotionally unsupportive familial environment
- Community Factors
  - * Lack of employment opportunities
  - * Lack of institutional support from police and judicial system
  - * General tolerance of sexual violence within the community
  - * Weak community sanctions against sexual violence perpetrators
- Societal Factors
  - * Poverty
  - * Societal norms that support sexual violence
  - * Societal norms that support male superiority and sexual entitlement
  - * Societal norms that maintain women's inferiority and sexual submissiveness
  - * Weak laws and policies related to gender equity
  - * High tolerance levels of crime and other forms of violence

Protective Factors for Perpetration

Protective factors may lessen the likelihood of sexual violence victimization or perpetration by buffering against risk. These factors can exist at individual, relational, community, and societal levels.
