1. A message from Patty Wetterling

As the holiday season is fast approaching, I just wanted to say thank you to all of you, our friends and partners, for the incredible work being done to prevent sexual violence. During troubling times of harsh media coverage of sad, traumatic stories on a topic that we all know well, it is important to take the time to revisit what we started with on our five year plan and dare to Imagine a World Without Sexual Violence or Exploitation.

It's so very important to remember not just what we are all fighting against but also, what we are fighting for. In 2009, we brainstormed and selected the words to steer us to that world which would bring more: Trust, Freedom, Equality, Respect, Caring, Respectful Relationships, Dignity, Safety and Confidence.

I get to see that promise in the faces and smiles of my 1 year old, 5 year old and 7 year old granddaughters, my 2 ½ year old grandson, my neighbors' children, the kids on the bus... I hold our work close to my heart as being my life's vision. We are making a difference in the lives of so many children and we make an even bigger difference when we work together.

Thank you for being part of this effort and for believing in a better safer world for all of us. Have a Thankful Weekend and Many happy days in the holidays to come.

With hope,

Patty

2. 16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence, November 25-December 10, 2011

The 16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence is an international campaign originating from the first Women's Global Leadership Institute sponsored by the Center for Women's Global Leadership in 1991. Participants chose the dates November 25- International Day Against Violence Against Women- and December 10- International Human Rights Day- in order to symbolically link violence against women and human rights and to emphasize that such violence is a violation of human rights .

This 16-day period also highlights other significant dates including November 29, International Women Human Rights Defenders Day, December 1, World AIDS Day, and December 6, which marks the Anniversary of the Montreal Massacre. The 16 Days Campaign has been used as an organizing strategy by individuals and groups around the world to call for the elimination of all forms of violence against women by:

- § raising awareness about gender-based violence as a human rights issue at the local, national, regional and international levels

- § strengthening local work around violence against women

- § establishing a clear link between local and international work to end violence against women
- § providing a forum in which organizers can develop and share new and effective strategies
- § demonstrating the solidarity of women around the world organizing against violence against women
- § creating tools to pressure governments to implement promises made to eliminate violence against women

Over 3,700 organizations in approximately 164 countries have participated in the 16 Days Campaign since 1991!

9. Article: Waging war against youth prostitution

November 21, 2011, Waging war against youth prostitution

By Sarah McKenzie, editor, THE JOURNAL

// Women's Foundation of Minnesota launches MN Girls Are Not For Sale campaign //

The Women's Foundation of Minnesota is spearheading a five-year, $4 million campaign to fight the prostitution of girls in the state. The foundation, based in the Mill District, has raised $2.6 million so far and plans to award its first round of grants totaling $340,000 to agencies and nonprofits in January.

While it's difficult to determine how many girls are being sold for sex, the foundation points to recent research estimating that on average, 213 girls are sold four to six times per day through Internet listings and escort services. That number does not include (prostitution occurring in hotels or on the street.

The campaign comes as law enforcement agencies around the state have reported a dramatic increase in youth prostitution. The foundation cites a study showing that the number of adolescent girls prostituted on Internet classified ads and escort services spiked by 166 percent in a 10-month period in 2010 compared to the year before.

There are a variety of problems that put young girls at risk for prostitution, said Lee Roper-Batker, president and CEO of the Women's Foundation of Minnesota. The average age girls get recruited into prostitution is 13. Some start as young as 11, according to the U.S. Justice Department. "Poverty is a common theme," she said. "Young women who are vulnerable — maybe there is sexual abuse at home or conflict at home."

Law enforcement officials across the state reported that the Internet is the major driver in sex trafficking. "The Internet has done for selling girls exactly what Amazon did for selling books," Roper-Batker said. "There's that increased anonymity that men have in being able to buy a girl and essentially have her delivered to their door."

Youth prostitution is a major problem across the state, and according to the FBI, the Twin Cities ranks among the 13 largest centers in the country for the prostitution of girls.

Minneapolis City Attorney Susan Segal praised the work of the foundation to tackle the problem. She met with the foundation a few years ago to see if they were interested in working on the issue after the city was noticing more girls being picked up for prostitution. "I applaud them for doing [the campaign] because this issue of sexually exploited kids — it's here," she said.

"It's in Minneapolis, it's in the suburbs, and trying to raise the profile of this issue so that we can start seeing it and really responding to it in a more effective way is critical." Segal said she's convened a group with Minneapolis Police Lt. Nancy Dunlap to explore how the city can best thwart youth prostitution. "In Hennepin County [the girls] have only rarely been charged with prostitution because law enforcement recognizes them as victims, but as a consequence they have largely just been falling through the cracks," she said.

The MN Girls Are Not For Sale campaign is about reaching the girls before they can be victimized. Organizers have three primary goals. First, they are pushing for legislation that would include all girls under the age of 18 who have been sold for sex in the state as victims of a crime entitled to safe housing and other services. The Minnesota Safe Harbor Law passed last legislative session applies to children under the age of 16 involved in prostitution.

Jeff Bauer, director of public policy for The Family Partnership, a Minneapolis-based advocacy group, was involved in lobbying for the safe harbor law last session. He said national leaders working on child sex trafficking around the country are watching Minnesota closely to see what impact the law will have on protecting girls. “Our success in implementing the Safe Harbor provisions over the next three years will not only change the lives of girls here in Minnesota, but catalyze similar change all across the country,” he said.

Campaign organizers are also working on decreasing demand for sex with girls through educational outreach and public awareness efforts. Thirdly, the foundation is working on mobilizing the public to get involved in fighting the problem.

Finding a way to shelter youth rescued from prostitution is another major goal. Currently there are only two shelter beds in the state for girls formerly involved in prostitution. “Housing is a critical issue we hear about over and over again,” Roper-Batker said. “Homelessness is a big trigger [for prostitution].”

The foundation said there’s many ways people can get involved with the campaign, including getting educated about the issue, donating money and contacting local lawmakers.

Roper-Batker is confident campaign organizers will make a difference in the lives of girls victimized by sexual exploitation. “We’ve really got the spotlight on this issue now and we feel the movement has some muscle,” she said.

10. Book Recommendations

1-Olga Trujillo's The Sum of My Parts <http://www.olgatrujillo.com/>

Olga Trujillo's childhood was marked by such extensive violence and sexual abuse that she developed the ability to observe scenes from her life as though they were happening to someone else.

Blocking herself from the terrors of her real life, Olga began to "go away in her head" and create alternate senses of herself, or parts—distinct personalities that allowed her to compartmentalize and temporarily forget her father's attacks so that she could make friends and attend school like any other child.

Dissociative identity disorder (DID) had taken hold. Formerly known as multiple personality disorder, DID helped Olga to function, but this disorder is associated with horrifying flashbacks, suicidal thoughts, mood swings, memory loss, panic attacks, and the confusion of not knowing one's true identity.

The Sum of My Parts is the story of Ms. Trujillo's courageous struggle to understand and overcome the psychological aftereffects of her abusive childhood and an inspiring look into the remarkable power of the human brain to protect itself at all costs.

After years of relying on a complex network of fragmented memories in order to function and survive, Olga learns to integrate her parts through psychotherapy and begins to see the whole picture of her life for the first time.

Today, Olga Trujillo is an attorney, speaker, and advocate for victims of domestic violence and child abuse. This memoir of triumph over the most devastating conditions will enlighten and inspire anyone whose life has been affected by violence, abuse, or trauma.

2-Christine Stark's Nickels <http://www.christinestark.com/>

Nickels follows a biracial girl named "Little Miss So and So", from age 4-1/2 into adulthood. Told in a series of prose poems, Nickels' lyrical and inventive language conveys the dissociative states born of a world formed by persistent and brutal incest and homophobia. The dissociative states enable the child's survival and, ultimately, the adult's healing. The story is both heartbreaking and triumphant. Nickels is the groundbreaking debut of Minneapolis-area author and artist Christine Stark.

"Christine Stark has crafted a language and a diction commensurate with the shredding of consciousness that is a consequence of childhood sexual abuse. She brings us a wholly original voice in a riveting novel of desperation and love. Every sentence vibrates with a terrible beauty. Every sentence brings the news."

--Patricia Weaver Francisco, author of Telling: A Memoir of Rape and Recovery

"To be taken into the mind of a child can be an enchanting adventure, but to be taken into the mind of a child who is abused, confused, and taken for granted is a lingering, livid journey. I applaud her fortitude to bring an olden--too long ignored-- truth out of the darkness with blazing, innovative light."

--MariJo Moore, author of The Diamond Doorknob

"In Nickels, Christine Stark, powerfully portrays the story of abuse and its impact on our lives. When this beautifully written and compelling story leaves, you are left wanting more. It's riveting; a book that will capture you from the beginning and carry you through the end. Everyone should read this book."

--Olga Trujillo, author of The Sum of My Parts

"...a perfect genius that makes the impossible in expression, possible; the unknowable in experience, knowable"

--Anya Achtenberg, author of The Stories of Devil-Girl

3-Erica Staab's The In Between

<http://ericastaabdotcom.files.wordpress.com/2011/08/cover.gif>

The In-between is a concept that we all have experience with, but not a lot has been written about. The moments in-between the pain or trauma when the wound is no longer throbbing, but yet it is still so tender to the touch, that time when the scar hasn't yet formed to protect the tenderness beneath. It is something that can be applicable to death of a loved one, or the deaths of dreams, slights, hurts at the hand of another, the derailment of what we had planned, the cumulative losses we experience over the course of our lives.

This book is for anyone who is in the mist of their own "In-Between", when life is a little much and you could use a cheering section. A book for those moments when you need to be reminded you aren't alone. It is intended to be a Gift Book to share with others, for those occasions when your heart is full but you can't find the words and you would like to offer someone a tangible piece of support.

A book to help remind you that where you are is exactly where you need to be, a reminder that healing takes time, that love will find a way, and that hope wins out one healing moment at a time. It is also a book for those moments when those words sound hollow and empty.

This gift is intended to meet you wherever you are at in your In-Between.
