2. Web Conference: Findings from the National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey: Implications for Prevention, February 1, 2012 (repeated on February 2)

In December 2010, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released the initial findings from the National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey (NISVS). This survey became the subject of hundreds of news stories about the prevalence of sexual violence, intimate partner violence and stalking. In this web conference, we will share results of the survey and explore the implications for prevention efforts.

Wednesday, Feb. 1, 2012 and repeated on Thursday, Feb. 2, 2012

This ninety-minute (90 min) session begins at 11 a.m. Pacific Time (2 PM Eastern, 1 PM Central, Noon Mountain, 10 AM Alaska, 8 AM Hawaii).

3. Press Conference: Teen Dating Violence Prevention Plan, February 9, 2012

Please join the State Alliance on Healthy Youth Relationships (SAHYR) led by the Minnesota Department of Health and the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women as we release the state Teen Dating Violence Prevention Plan, developed as a part of an 18 month teen dating violence prevention project, funded by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

The event will include a short press conference followed by group discussions on the state Teen Dating Violence Prevention Plan as it moves into its implementation phase. We will close with a reception to celebrate the successful completion of the state plan and the possibilities that it creates to promote safe and respectful youth relationships in Minnesota.

"Approximately one in three adolescent girls in the United States is a victim of physical, emotional or verbal abuse from a dating partner"—a figure that far exceeds victimization rates for other types of violence affecting youth. -The National Council on Crime and Delinquency

5 Minnesotans between the ages of 16-21 were murdered due to dating violence in 2011.

—Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women's 2011 Femicide Report

Teen dating violence is a pervasive problem in Minnesota and Nationwide. We look forward to your partnership as we begin to take action to prevent teen dating violence in Minnesota. Please contact Sasha Cotton at 651-646-6177x27 or scotton@mcbw.org with any questions.

We look forward to seeing you on February 9 from 10-12 at Snelling Office Park, 1645 Energy Park Drive, St. Paul, MN. 8. National Call to Action Institute and Conference, July 9-13, 2012

The Women of Color Network (WOCN) is excited to announce the 2012 National Call to Action Institute and Conference scheduled for July 9-13, 2012 in Minneapolis, MN. The theme for this ground-breaking experience is "Collective Empowerment, Collective Liberation." The framework for the institute and conference is based on the following guiding principles:

Uniting women of color across ethnicity, race, age, citizenship, sexual orientation, disability, body type, faith, discipline, and locality for collective survival. Inspiring those working to be allies to aim for collective liberation in challenging racism, classism, sexism, homophobia, heterosexism, trans phobia, ableism, xenophobia, ageism, and other forms of oppression and bias.

As we move forward collectively, we need to hear from you, our constituents. This is a means to ensure that both the institute and conference meet your needs while providing an empowering atmosphere and access to trainings that seek to sustain leadership and collaboration within the anti-violence against women movement.

Please take a few minutes, to complete the initial 2012 WOCN Institute and Conference Planning RSVP Survey. Know that all responses will be collected anonymously, remain confidential and used solely for planning purposes. Link here for more information <http://www.womenofcolornetwork.org>

11. NSVRC Releases New Prevention Report

The NSVRC is pleased to announce the release of the Prevention Assessment Year 2 Report: Innovations in Prevention, prepared for the NSVRC by Stephanie M. Townsend, PhD. Special thanks to PreventConnect for providing additional support to augment the assessment and include an examination of how innovations diffuse.

http://www.nsvrc.org/sites/default/files/file/Projects_RPE_NSVRC_Year2FinalReport_%201-9-12.pdf

<http://preventconnect.org/>

This second phase of the NSVRC's Prevention Assessment project focused on interviews with innovative prevention programs and a diffusion survey to document how innovations have spread throughout the sexual violence prevention field. The emphasis of this assessment was on how programs are thinking about primary prevention and the processes that allowed innovation to develop. This report contains findings from that assessment.

Podcasts conducted by PreventConnect with some of the programs interviewed for the report can be found in the following link:

If you have questions about this report or the prevention assessment project, please contact jgrove@nsvrc.org.

12. Happy early Valentine's Day!

"Valentine, Be Yours" cards are available from <http://www.voicesofmen.org/valentines-day-be-yours-campaign.html>.

The cards feature a heart with an equal sign (now the logo for "Voices of Men" and The Voices Project), along with a message that promotes healthy relationships.

In the past, local groups have printed these cards and used them with high schools, middle schools, colleges and adults. Some groups have tied carnations to each card and sold them as fundraisers. Others have translated them into different languages.

Every year, we offer these designs free of charge. This year, in memory of the late, great Ellen Pence, we ask that folks make an optional donation to your local domestic violence program or rape crisis center, or (as is being done in lieu of flowers for Ellen's memorial) the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women, <http://www.mcbw.org/>.

Ellen was a giant in our movement – personally, she taught me the value of using humor to disarm an audience's defensiveness when educating them about these topics. Her example inspired me to create the play "Voices of Men," and I miss her very much. Ben Atherton-Zeman

13. Judith Kahn, MSW hired as Teenwise Minnesota's new Executive Director

Judith Kahn, MSW was recently hired as Teenwise Minnesota's new Executive Director. Judith is known locally and nationally as a strong leader, collaborative partner, strategic thinker and passionate advocate for young people. She has devoted her professional and personal life to ensuring that all young people have the knowledge, skills and supports and opportunities they need to live healthy lives.

Judith comes to Teenwise with a wealth of experience in the public and non-profit arenas. Most recently, Judith has been leading Judith Kahn + Associates, L.L.C., a consulting group working with communities, agencies and states to implement strategies for effective youth development policies, practices and programs.

Previously, Judith was the Executive Director of the Minneapolis Youth Coordinating Board, an intergovernmental policy organization focused on improving the well-being of Minneapolis children and youth, and was the founder and first Executive Director of the Konopka Institute for Best Practices in Adolescent Health at the University of Minnesota.

Judith has written and co-authored numerous publications related to adolescent health and development and serves on the board of several youth and family organizations.

Teenwise Minnesota is at an exciting moment in our history. We have a new name, a new leader and a bold vision for the future. We are eager to continue our work to promote the sexual health and well-being of young people across our state and are thrilled to have Judith Kahn lead the way.

14. Article: What is the difference between adolescents who sexually abuse and others who commit non-sexual crimes?

Article: What is the difference between adolescents who sexually abuse and others who commit non-sexual crimes?

by Steven Bengis, David S. Prescott, and Joan Tabachnick

Question

What differentiates youth who have sexually abused from those who don't reoffend or reoffend in non-sexual ways?

The Research

In September 2011, Julie Carpentier and Jean Proulx published a study designed to identify the risk factors for re-offense among adolescents who had sexually abused. They chose a sample of 351 male adolescents between the ages of 11 and 18, who had sexually offended and had been assessed at an outpatient center in Montreal, Canada. The study examined over 100 variables to correlate with any new criminal charges in three areas: overall recidivism; violent recidivism (including violent sexual recidivism); and, sexual recidivism.

With a mean follow-up period of 8 years, the results confirm that adolescents who have sexually abused committed other criminal offenses, but few sexually abused again. More specifically, the study indicated that: 10% were charged with at least one new sexual offense; 30% were charged with a violent offense (including sexual offenses); and 45% were charged with a new offense (of any kind).

The study concluded that the youth reoffended relatively quickly (almost half of those who commit another offense do so within two years, 75% do so within four years). Identified risk factors for each of the three areas included:

Sexual Recidivists: paternal abandonment (plays a particularly important role in sexual criminality beyond adolescence) and association with significantly younger children.

Violent and Overall Recidivists: an official criminal record, an unofficial history of delinquency, and a diagnosis of ADD (all of which the authors suggest may be understood as indices of impulsivity or low self-control).

All Recidivists: Sexual victimization was the only risk factor associated with an increase in the risk of sexual, violent, and overall recidivism.

15. Article: Men Struggle for Rape Awareness

Keith Smith was 14 when he was raped by a driver who picked him up after a hockey team meeting. He had hitchhiked home, which is why, for decades, he continued to blame himself for the assault.

When the driver barreled past Hartley's Pork Pies on the outskirts of Providence, R.I., where Mr. Smith had asked to be dropped off, and then past a firehouse, he knew something was wrong. "I tried to open the car door, but he had rigged the lock," said Mr. Smith, of East Windsor, N.J., now 52. Still, he said, "I had no idea it was going to be a sexual assault."

Even today, years after the disclosure of the still-unfolding child abuse scandal in the Catholic Church and the arrest of a former Pennsylvania State University assistant football coach accused of sexually abusing boys, rape is widely thought of as a crime against women.

Until just a few weeks ago, when the federal government expanded its definition of rape to include a wider range of sexual assaults, national crime statistics on rape included only assaults against women and girls committed by men under a narrow set of circumstances. Now they will also include male victims.

<http://www.nytimes.com/2012/01/07/us/politics/federal-crime-statistics-to-expand-rape-definition.html>

While most experts agree women are raped far more often than men, 1.4 percent of men in a recent national survey said they had been raped at some point. The study, by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, found that when rape was defined as oral or anal penetration, one in 71 men said they had been raped or had been the target of attempted rape, usually by a man they knew. (The study did not include men in prison.)

16. Commentary: What counts as rape, and who counts as a survivor

Commentary: What counts as rape, and who counts as a survivor

By Nancy Donoval

January 23, 2012

For the first time in 80 years, the FBI has changed its definition of rape. This won't change state or federal laws or how rapes are prosecuted. It will change how rape and attempted rape are counted in national statistics. So, if this is just an accounting change for a report most of us will never see, why should we care?

<http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/advisory-policy-board>

The word "rape" has power. You can't fight or heal what you cannot name. When I was in college, I told this guy I was dating about a bad thing that had happened the year before with someone I thought was my friend. He said, "Nancy, that's rape. What you just described is called rape."

As soon as he said it, I knew he was right ... and I wondered why I hadn't figured it out for myself. Now I know that lots of survivors don't realize what happened counts as rape. Or the idea is too painful and we take refuge in denial. Continue reading:
