SVPN Meeting/Videoconference/Live-Webstream: From Scandal to Social Change, W. St. Paul, MN, May 10, 2013

From Scandal to Social Change

Using recent public child sexual abuse allegations in youth sports and youth serving organizations as the backdrop, Yvonne Courmoyer, Sexual Violence Prevention Coordinator at the Minnesota Coalition Against Sexual Assault (MNCASA), will lead a discussion of what needs to change to create safe environments for children.

Yvonne will provide a brief case study of recent "scandals" to illustrate the gaps in current practice that allow sexual abuse to occur at such alarming rates. Yvonne will discuss that effecting the changes that will prevent children from ever experiencing sexual harm in these settings, will require social change at all levels of society—from individuals to institutions.

You will leave this presentation with knowledge and tools you can use in your own life and to work with parents and youth serving organizations to proactively prevent child sexual abuse.

Date: Friday, May 10, 2013, 11:00 a.m. – 1:30 p.m. (registration/networking from 10:30-11:00, presentation/videoconference begins at 11:00)

2. Safe Places: Creating Positive Frameworks in Youth Programming, April 25, Duluth, MN

Do the youth at your program feel welcomed? Are the parents smiled at by all staff? Does your staff know how to measure the effectiveness of smiles? If you were unsure or answered no to any of these questions, you need to attend this conference.

Children and youth thrive in environments that are welcoming, calm and predictable. Creating and sustaining such environments depend upon behaviors and skills of the entire staff. This presentation will review the framework of a whole school climate effort and the elements needed to ensure that any welcoming climate initiative in ANY setting is fully implemented and evaluated with qualitative and quantitative data. Multiple examples will be provided.

With all of the negative things that occur in the world today, this training is one small thing you can do to try to make your work environment a safe and happy place.

Register for this AND Engaging Native American Youth and enjoy a FREE networking lunch between sessions!

About the Presenters: Nancy Riestenberg is the School Climate Specialist for the Minnesota Department of Education. She provides technical assistance on violence and bullying prevention, school connectedness, school climate, dropout prevention, cultural relevance in prevention education, crisis prevention and recovery, and restorative measures. She has also provided technical assistance in restoring the learning environment to Minnesota school districts that experienced school shooting incidents. She is the author of Circle in the Square: Building Community and Repairing Harm in Schools.

Eric Kloos is a Supervisor in the Special Education Division of the Minnesota Department of Education. His work at MDE includes a focus on all education partnerships to support academic and behavioral prevention and intervention, including Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports (PBIS).

Logistics: Thursday, April 25, 2013, 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM

3. Webinar: Therapy Animals Can Help Maltreated Children. April 25, 2013

On April 25th, from 11-12:30, the Minnesota Alliance on Crime and our NCVRW partners are hosting a free webinar for both dog owners and people who work with victims -- Therapy Animals Helping Maltreated Children.

The webinar will explore the benefits therapy animals can offer to child crime victims. Our presenter is national expert Allie Phillips from the National District Attorneys Association, who co-created the Therapy Animals Supporting Kids (TASK)[™] Program.

Ms. Phillips will discuss how to work with volunteer animal therapy teams, provide examples of how these teams are being utilized in other jurisdictions, and address some of the common questions and concerns about working with therapy animals. CLE and POST credits have been applied for.

6. MNCASA Theater and Writing Workshops, May 17-19, 2013

The Minnesota Coalition Against Sexual Assault (MNCASA) still has a few openings for their May free weekend theater and writing workshops for survivors of child sexual abuse and others (family members, friends, advocates, professional allies) whose lives have been affected by child sexual abuse and who want to use their experience to prevent more children from being harmed. Workshops will be facilitated by Cordelia Anderson with support from artists from the Pillsbury House Theatre.

We particularly encourage family members, friends, advocates, and allied professionals who have been impacted by the ripple effects of child sexual abuse to participate in these workshops.

Contact Yvonne Cournoyer at 651-288-7444 for a registration form or if you have questions or need more information about the workshops.

A big thank to everyone who has helped promote the Minnesota Department of Health Campus Sexual Violence Prevention Portal over the past few months! The Portal has been getting almost 2,000 hits per month, and we are pleased that people are visiting the page and learning about sexual violence prevention on college campuses. If you have any questions or suggestions for the website, please contact Sarah Dugan or Hannah Rivenburgh. Thank you.

11. Olga Trujillo, Psychology Today blog, The Power of Culture

Olga Trujillo, J.D., an attorney and advocate for abuse victims, shares her own triumph over trauma.

The Power of Culture. My view of being Latina has evolved.

Published on April 4, 2013 by Olga Trujillo, J.D. in The Sum of My Parts

I grew up in a home where my father—whom we called Popi—could speak only Spanish, and strictly allowed only Spanish to be spoken around him. My Mame spoke English but with a strong accent, and my brothers and I learned to speak English only once we started school.

So we grew up in a traditional Latino home. Well, sort of. We spoke Spanish, we ate the food of my mother's Caribbean upbringing, and we learned the importance of familia. We understood that the only thing more important than family was God. We went to church every Sunday and took lessons from nuns at our local Catholic school.

Looking back, I'm not sure what Popi meant by familia. Some summers, he went away for weeks. We were told he had travelled to South America to visit his brothers and sisters but he never took us with him to meet them, never talked about them, and they never visited. Only as an adult did I discover that my father had been married twice before, so we were at least his third family. It all may seem strange now, but I knew then only to pay very close attention and ask no questions.

But my mom's sisters and brother, along with their children, came to see us once or twice a year. They always sent a representative to important events like my first communion. This is who I thought of as family.

Both Popi and Mame taught us the importance of treating them with respect—con respeto. The problem was that Popi's view of respeto changed like the weather and it was very hard to anticipate. Clearly he was the head of our household, and he often restated the importance of this role when he beat Mame. He ruled all of us with the back of his hand, his fist and his belt. His punishments were swift, painful, and unpredictable.

We also learned to respect our elders in general, and priests and nuns in particular. They were wiser than we could ever be, Popi explained, since priests and nuns are close to God and elders acquire wisdom simply from age.

This lesson would be especially important to me. Without knowing, Popi created for me a hierarchy of values that helped me to survive the terror he inflicted on his family in the name of culture and in the name of respect.

12. Chicago Public Schools Expand Sex Education

The Chicago Public Schools (CPS) passed a sex education mandate on February 27, 2013, which follows the National Sexuality Education Standards, outlining age-appropriate content for each grade level.

The new mandate, to be implemented in 2016, requires a set amount of time to be spent on sex education in every grade. The expanded requirements will affect approximately the 431,000 students who comprise the third largest public school system in country.

CPS' sex education program includes an "opt-out" provision for parents who do not want their child to participate in the program.

The new CPS sexual health education policy includes provisions for teaching kindergartners and first graders about anatomy, healthy relationships, and personal safety; teaching second and third graders about growth and development; teaching fourth graders about the physical, social, and emotional aspects of puberty, as well as the causes of HIV transmission; and as age-appropriate, teaching fifth – twelfth graders about human reproduction, healthy decision-making, bullying, abstinence, and contraception.
