5. Every Student Connected: How to Create a Safe and Respectful School Climate Forum, October 14, 2005

Nationally recognized research shows students' health and future success are closely linked to how connected they feel to their school. Feeling connected to school is also associated with lower levels of violent behavior, and protects students from cigarette, alcohol and drug use. However, bullying and other disruptive behavior disconnects students from school. Schools are seeking practical solutions to create a positive climate and build connections with students.

7. New Child Trends DataBank Indicator - Oral Sex Among Teens

New analyses of data from the just-released 2002 National Survey of Family Growth (NSFG) by Child Trends show that, among teens between the ages of 15 and 19, 55 percent of males and 54 percent of females reported engaging in oral sex in 2002 and may therefore be at risk for Sexually Transmitted Infections. Nationally representative data have been needed to replace speculation about the frequency of oral sex among teens, but nationally representative statistics on this topic have not been available until now. With the release of NSFG's survey, carried out by the National Center for Health Statistics under the Centers for Disease Control, a more complete picture is emerging. The Child's Trend Data Bank has additional information.

8. Alcohol and Sexual Risk Taking: What Parents Need to Know

Teens who report drinking alcohol on at least one occasion are seven times more likely to have had sexual intercourse than nondrinkers. Binge drinkers, like those who have ever used drugs, are three times more likely to have contracted an STD than nonproblem drinkers and nondrug users. Alcohol is more closely linked to sexual violence than any other drug and is a common companion to rape, including date rape. Alcohol use, by the victim, the perpetrator or both, is implicated in 46 to 75 percent of date rapes of college students. Additional information is available from Advocates for Youth.

10. Stop Bullying. Take a Stand! An In the Mix Special Highlighting Solutions for Bullying

Premieres on PBS stations nationwide the week of September 24th (check local PBS listings)

(New York, NY) Research from the Health Resources and Services Administration's (HRSA) National Bullying Campaign shows that up to 25 percent of U.S. students are bullied each year. As many as 160,000 may stay home from school on any given day because they are afraid of being bullied. Now, the growing trend of cyberbullying goes into the home via computers. At least 1 out of 3 teens say they have been seriously threatened online and 60% of teens say they have participated in online bullying. In response to many requests from teen victims and parents, In the Mix, the Emmy award winning teen series is premiering the half-hour special Stop Bullying. Take a Stand!

Hosted by Erika Harold, Miss America 2003, herself a victim of severe harassment, this solution oriented program presents a comprehensive and multifaceted approach to preventing bullying. It also provides help and advice to victims, parents and bystanders. Her personal story and advice is interwoven with compelling personal stories of teens who have also been bullied.

A visit to Olney, MD follows high school peer educators as they work with middle school students to produce PSAs showing what bystanders can do when they see someone being bullied. Everyone involved gains awareness about the various forms of bullying and harassment, and in the process, changes their own attitudes and behavior. Teens are also strongly encouraged to seek help from a trusted adult, such as a parent or school counselor before the problem escalates. We meet a girl who does speak up and gets an effective response from her counselor and principal.

Another segment focuses on the widespread problem of cyberbullying, with an AOL consumer advisor giving parents and teens practical advice about how to deal with online harassment. A school administrator speaks out about the necessity of a school-wide education/prevention policy that does not tolerate a "kids will be kids" attitude. The program's approach and information is based on the latest research and recommendations of HRSA's National Bullying Campaign, Take a Stand. Lend a Hand. Stop Bullying Now!

Stop Bullying. Take a Stand! has a companion discussion guide and video clips, personal stories, a transcript, resources, discussion guide and more. The program can be taped off air and is also available to schools and libraries as an educational video, with performance rights and education materials. Executive Producer, Sue Castle, notes "Bullying affects teens in so many negative ways and is remembered throughout their lives. We can no longer accept it as something that just a part of growing up and it can be prevented."

Airing on PBS stations nationwide for the past 13 years, In the Mix is the Emmy award winning weekly series for teens that provides information and solutions on critical issues such as violence prevention, drug abuse, depression, smoking, nutrition, self-esteem and many more. The In the Mix series is produced by Castle Works, Inc. and was created by WNYC Radio. The half hour programs and companion discussion guides are used by educators, health professionals and others who work with teens to raise awareness and open discussion on important topics. The company also produces the popular issue-oriented It's My Life, for 8-13 year olds.
