Comfort holds can help reduce stress and prevent movement while your child receives a vaccination. Along with distraction, telling stories, singing, or deep breathing, comfort holds can make vaccination easier.

Below are some suggestions for how to hold your child. Your health care provider may suggest a different hold when giving a vaccine.

Back to Chest (Front) Comfort Hold

- Hold your child on your lap facing away from you as you sit.
- Embrace your child during the process, crossing your arms in front of the child holding their right forearm with your left hand and their left forearm with your right hand.
- Anchor both of your child’s legs between your thighs and cross your legs over your child’s.
- Watch out for your child’s head so it doesn’t hit your face if they move.

Chest to Chest (Straddle or Hug) Comfort Hold

- Have your child sit on your lap facing you and wrap your child’s legs around your waist.
- Wrap your arms around the child’s lower back.
- Wrap your child’s arms around your waist and hold them firmly under your arms.
- Your child can put their head on your shoulder and turn their head away from the procedure.
- If your child’s arms reach all the way behind you, press lightly against the back of the chair.

Side Comfort Hold

- Have your child sit on your lap sideways.
- Wrap your child’s arm closest to you around your back and press lightly against the back of the chair.
- Wrap your arm around the child’s back and hold the upper arm.
- Use the other hand to hold the forearm and legs.

Side by Side Comfort Hold

- Sit next to your child and wrap your arm around their shoulders.
- Hold them close to you.
- Wrap your child’s arm around your back and press lightly against the back of the chair.
- Hold their forearm across your body.
