

When Participants Report Their Pump Is Not Working

SEPTEMBER 10, 2025

Tips for troubleshooting pump problems with participants.

- Have participant demonstrate or describe pump assembly in person, a video call, or have them email or text a video to staff to assure proper assembly. Many issues are related to improper assembly and/or missing or damaged pieces such as membranes, duck valves, and diaphragms.
- Have participant describe how they use the pump settings. Changing settings may be a fix.
- If low milk output is the reason why they think their pump is not working, assess the following:
 - When the last time the participant pumped? What is their pumping and direct feeding frequency?
 - Check on the pumping plan. Does it need to change to help increase milk supply? Milk supply may be lowered if the participant has not pumped or fed baby at the breast recently or consistently, stress and life changes, medications, etc.
 - Additional pump troubleshooting resource: New Little Life by Allison for additional information – STOP Buying Breast Pumps!!! 5 Things that might be causing your low milk supply. (12:55 minutes)
- Assess if replacement pieces are needed due to pump usage.
- Assess flange size/fit as needed.
- Refer participant to pump company customer service as needed. Share appropriate company Information below by copy/paste into email or text.
